Introduction

The Hunger Wars is a futuristic 3D PvP RPG that integrates blockchain technology with a sustainable play-to-earn model. Unlike traditional P2E games that suffer from inflation and lack of long-term revenue, The Hunger Wars introduces a circular economy powered by real ad revenue, skill-based rewards, and token scarcity.

The Problem

Most crypto games collapse due to unsustainable economic models. They flood the market with tokens, have no real revenue streams, and eventually devalue their ecosystems. This leads to massive early exits, low retention, and a lack of long-term trust in the project.

Our Solution

The Hunger Wars fixes this by implementing a play-to-earn loop based on actual revenue:

- Players must watch a short video ad to receive a Battle Key (required to play).
- Ad revenue is used to buy back CLX tokens, supporting token price and reducing circulating supply.
- PvP wins reward players with CLX.
- Premium NFT holders earn 10x rewards per win.
- After a fixed number of wins, rewards halve, creating scarcity and value appreciation.

Tokenomics

Total CLX Supply: 100 million

Reserved for Game Rewards: 21 million

Initial Token Price: $0.01

Reward Halving Events: Occur after milestones in total match wins

Referral Program: When someone refers a new player, and that referred player wins a match, 5% of the winning amount is rewarded to the sponsor, and an additional 5% is given to the referred player as a bonus.
